

Interested in joining career conversations? Try these blog sites:

Inside Education: Mothers attempting to balance parenthood and academics

http://www.insidehighered.com/views/blogs/mama\_phd

AAAS - Science Careers Blog

Get frequent updates from the science-career trenches including advice, opinion, news, funding opportunities, and links to other career-related resources.

<http://blogs.sciencemag.org/sciencecareers/>

“On Hiring” – The Chronicle of Higher Education

The Chronicle's Careers offers this helpful blog about the ins and outs of hiring, with articles and advice from The Chronicle and around the Web.

<http://chronicle.com/jobs/blogs/onhiring/>

Phd's.Org - Engineering Science: Building better scientists and engineers

<http://blog.phds.org/>

Nature.com - Blogs, Nature Publishing Group's community-run blog tracking and indexing service.

<http://blogs.nature.com/>

On Becoming a Domestic and Laboratory Goddess

The Egyptian goddess Isis was celebrated as the ideal wife and mother.

“The blogger known as Dr. Isis has some fancy-sounding degrees and is a physiologist at a major research university working on some terribly impressive stuff. She blogs about balancing her research career with the demands of raising small children, how to succeed as a woman in academia, and anything else she finds interesting. Also, she blogs about shoes. In fact, she blogs a lot about shoes.

About 80% of what Dr. Isis writes is the God's honest truth. About 20% is total nonsense. Dr. Isis makes no claims as to which is which and neither should you”

<http://scienceblogs.com/isisthescientist/>

Nature Forums:

<http://network.nature.com/forums>