Seniority and Situational Gender in Postcolonial Ghana

SERENA OWUSUA DANKWA is a doctoral candidate in Social Anthropology at the University of Berne in Switzerland. Engaging with African feminist, postcolonial, and queer epistemologies, her dissertation investigates the shifting meanings of female friendship and same-sex intimacy in Southern Ghana. Her ethnographic research has been supported by the Center for Gender and Advocacy of the University of Ghana Legon, and was funded through the Swiss National Science Foundation. Dankwa holds an MA in teaching and performing classical guitar from the Conservatory of Lucerne and an MA in African Studies from SOAS, the School of Oriental and African Studies in London. Her publications include “Shameless Maidens’: Women’s Agency and the Mission in Akuapem,” Agenda Sexuality and Body Image (2005); “It’s a Silent Trade’: Female Same-Sex Intimacies in Postcolonial Ghana,” Nordic Journal of Feminist and Gender Research (2009). Besides her academic studies she has performed as a guitarist and kora player with various poets and activists and worked as a freelance music journalist and presenter with Swiss Radio and Television. Serena is the third Sarah Pettit Fellow in LGBT Studies at Yale University.

THE SARAH PETTIT FUND was established in 2003 as a permanent endowment to honor and perpetuate the memory of lesbian activist Sarah Pettit, who earned her BA from Yale in 1988. Pettit died in 2003 in the midst of a high profile career as a writer, editor, and LGBTQ advocate. She was for many years the editor-in-chief and vice president of OUT Magazine, which she co-founded in 1992. In 1999, she was appointed the senior editor of Newsweek's Arts and Entertainment section. She served on the advisory board of the New York Lesbian and Gay Anti-Violence Project.
